

How to write a speech

Salutation

You greet your audience, f.i.:

Hello everyone!

or more formal:

Dear guests,

Eine Anekdote ist eine kurze Geschichte über etwas, das du z.B. erlebt hast, die mit dem Thema der Rede zu tun hat

Introduction

You express thanks for the invitation to speak, f.i.:

Thank you (so much) for inviting me.

Try to make the audience interested in your topic by telling an anecdote regarding your speeches' topic and/or asking a question, f.i.:

-A few weeks ago I talked to... and he/she said: ...That made me wonder/think: Is it really true that ...?

-Can you believe that ...? -A couple weeks ago I read an article about... Did you know that...?

After that you tell the audience which topic you want to talk about and what your speech includes, f.i.:

Today I want to tell you about / talk about... First, I will explain... Then... Finally...

Main Part

You tell the audience what you think about the topic and why, f.i.:

From my point of view... / In my opinion...

I think so because... (give a few reasons!)

You can also ask questions (and give them answer to those right away), f.i.: Don't we all want peace and happiness? (-Of course we do!) You don't need (to give) an answer if you think that you ask something that everybody would say "Yes" to!

Conclusion

You briefly sum up the main ideas of your speech, f.i.:

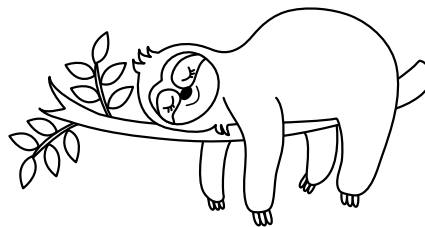

To come to a conclusion... / So what's most important is that we...

If we want ..., we need to...

You thank the audience for listening, f.i.:

Thank you for listening.

Zoos – Pros and cons

Many people and especially children love going to the zoo.

Being able to see so many different animals in one place is great and much cheaper than flying to Africa where a lot of these animals live in the wild.

For many people, going to the zoo is like a mini vacation from their stressful life. Some people could watch the monkeys for hours, have lunch or a picnic there and enjoy the nature. Zoos are also a nice destination for school excursions. Children can learn about the behaviour, protection and the need of the living creatures. They become aware of environmental problems such as the deforestation of the rain forest which lead to the extinction or endangerment of many different animals. Zoos often work with global partners to teach their visitors and get them engaged in projects to save and rescue endangered species. People also may live more eco-friendly after learning about these specific topics at the zoo. Most people love animals and if you love something you want to protect it. That's why many projects around the world can only succeed through the help of zoos. Zoos can also help animals that would not survive in the wild, such as a bird that can't fly anymore because it has lost a wing. They also save endangered animals from hunters or starving. Through breeding programs, zoos can increase the number of a certain species so that the species doesn't extinct. Some rescued animals can be reintroduced into the wild after a couple of years.

However, not all of the zoos around the world are the same. In some countries the state supports zoos financially and keeps an eye on the conditions. In other countries there aren't many regulations and zoos don't have enough money to offer its animals a nice surrounding and good food. The staff may not know everything about the animals in order to provide the best care for them. In a lot of zoos the cages are too small and since the animals are locked in there, it can be very boring or stressful for them. They can get depressed or show other psychological illnesses. Birds can't fly because they are locked in small cages. Lions don't have to hunt because they get food from the zookeepers every day. These facts - among others - can make it hard for some animals to return to the wild where they would live in a completely different environment under totally different circumstances. Our moderate climate can also be too cold for animals who usually live in tropical and hot areas.

Some people say that the animals look miserable in captivity and that we don't need zoos to learn about animals since there are many tv shows and documentaries that can educate as well.

What's your opinion?

Please write a speech of about 180-200 words.

If you can't, you don't have to decide if you are for or against zoos.

You can also find compromises and talk about "the perfect zoo" from your point of view.

Which animals should live in a zoo and under which circumstances?

Vocabulary

behaviour - Verhalten, protection - Schutz, (to) become aware - bewusst werden, environmental problems - Umweltprobleme, deforestation - Entwaldung/Abholzung des Waldes, extinction - Aussterben, endangerment - Gefährdung, (to) succeed - gelingen/Erfolg haben, hunters - Jäger, (to) starve - verhungern, breeding programs - Zuchtprogramme, (to) increase - steigern, (to) support - unterstützen, conditions - Zustände, surrounding - Umgebung, (to) provide - bieten, circumstances - Verhältnisse/Umstände, captivity - Gefangenschaft

Giving feedback on a speech

Feedback for: _____

You ...

... wrote a salutation.

... thanked the organizer for the invitation to speak.

... started the speech with an anecdote and/or a question.

... said which topic you want to talk about.

... gave a brief overview about the order of your speech.

... said what you think about the topic and why.

... summed up the main ideas of your speech.

... thanked the audience for listening.

... wrote at least 180-200 words.

I think that _____.

Yours _____

salutation - Begrüßung, brief overview - kurze Übersicht, order - Reihenfolge, audience - Publikum

©katjunipero

Giving feedback on a speech

Feedback for: _____

You ...

... wrote a salutation.

... thanked the organizer for the invitation to speak.

... started the speech with an anecdote and/or a question.

... said which topic you want to talk about.

... gave a brief overview about the order of your speech.

... said what you think about the topic and why.

... summed up the main ideas of your speech.

... thanked the audience for listening.

... wrote at least 180-200 words.

I think that _____.

Yours _____

salutation - Begrüßung, brief overview - kurze Übersicht, order - Reihenfolge, audience - Publikum

©katjunipero